ADULT MEDIATION

PROGRAM SUMMARY

Adult Mediation is available to people 18 or older who are experiencing conflict and willing to meet with one another to discuss the situation with the assistance of trained mediators in a safe, supported manner.

Conversation in mediation focuses on three main things: the participants' stories; the impacts of the conflict; and finding a mutually acceptable agreement that will help people move forward.

Participants should be willing to share their story and experiences; be willing to listen to the other person; and will get a chance to ask questions of the other person. All are encouraged to take responsibility for their actions, listen to the others' perspectives and to repair harm.

Mediation is not a process in which mediators make decisions or tell participants what they are to do.

Participation in this process is voluntary for all involved.

PROCESS

After receiving the referral from the police officer, a caseworker will contact you, usually within a few days, to confirm interest in participating and to set up a time for you to meet individually with the two mediators.

During this meeting, the mediators will explain the program to you; you will get a chance to ask questions; and share your story, experiences from your perspective and what you hope to get out of this process. The mediators will also meet individually with the other person.

Following these individual meetings with participants, and after ensuring everyone feels comfortable proceeding, the mediators will bring everyone together for the mediation, during which a mutual agreement will be made to help address any harm that has been caused and help everyone move forward.

There is no fee to participate in this program. Funding has been provided by United Way.
